Overview

Trained plasterers work on housing sites, city developments and domestic extensions like conservatories - and on new builds, conversions and repairs.

There's the choice between the security of site work - and branching out to start your own business. If you choose to go self-employed, plastering's a good choice as you won't lose days to bad weather!

What you'll learn

You'll develop your practical skills and learn a variety of subjects including:

- Materials and their uses (including fibrous work)
- Technical drawing
- Calculating materials
- Estimating
- Communications in construction

Assessments / Exams

You'll be marked on:

- Continuous practical assessments
- Individual unit assessments
- An end-of-year online exam

Entry requirements

You will need to have GCSE Maths, English Language and two additional subjects at grade 2 (E) or above.
